

My pony, Autumn (also known as Pony), is around 14 years old and I've had her for about 3 years now. We've competed as hunters, jumpers, and done a dressage test together these last 2 years. Our first year together was spent training and getting her to canter more than one circle around the arena. Second year we entered our first schooling show, and we had a blast. That's when I knew that showing was going to be a part of our future. Our third year we really got into it. We even started doing cross country and that's when I found out the speed Pony could reach. She was extremely happy in the field and so was I. From then on, we did every clinic we could get our hands on. We also competed in multiple bronze shows around the New-Brunswick area and participated in the provincial bronze championship. I am always seeking to gain more experience for the show ring, and I think Autumn is too.
